From evidence to quality

Jean Slutsky, Dave Davis, Sue Huckson

Case It is 2022. After ten years of effort, your country now has a seamless and effective clinical practice guideline presence. Guidelines are created and/or adapted based on best evidence; physicians, health professionals and health systems readily adopt them; healthcare delivery, quality and cost of care, and –most importantly – patient outcomes are all vastly improved.

Question 1: what local and national, problems, challenges and elements were identified a decade ago? What efforts were undertaken to solve them, and align and operationalize best practices? [Participants are asked to reflect on these elements for one minute, pair off with a neighbor to discuss their ideas, then share with the general audience]

3 groups

- Translation of certainty and uncertainty into practice
- Knowledge transfer and guidance
- Data drive quality

Question 2: How could G-I-N help in this process? What tools, resources, support could it lend to the improvement of guideline production, adaption and uptake? Think-pair-share exercise
