

Brian Kanaahe Mwebaze

Brian Kanaahe Mwebaze Bilal is a Public Health Lecturer at Bishop Stuart University, Uganda where he is supporting Public Health Innovation, Evidence & Policy Unit.

He supports the UN Major Group on Children and Youth as an external Working Group Member in gathering local and international young people's views on humanitarian aid for the World Humanitarian Summit 2016. He is also supporting implementation of Prehospital and first aid guidelines with the Uganda Red Cross and is a member of Guidelines International Network-Low Middle Income Countries Working Group.

Brian has previously been one of the 19 Global Young Researchers under the Case for Space Research Project of Restless Development, Youth Business International & War Child Global Youth Advocacy Report. Brian has supported the African Union Commission Medical Services in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia in establishing, implementing and evaluating continent wide Africa Union Health Workers Corps during the Ebola Outbreak to West Africa. He has previously undertaken assignments with UNAIDS-Ndola, Zambia, UNAIDS-Geneva, & WHO-Kinshasa. Brian holds a Bsc, EMT, MPH and is doing his DrPH (Public Health) from the Universidad Central De Nicaragua. His research interests are Menstrual Health, Road traffic injuries and Prehospital Care.

When not looking for evidence to help governments, international agencies, academia and youth organisations to knit with a pattern in public health guidelines practice, Brian does nutmegs, flipflaps and related Brianinho soccer moves. He blames his Twitter handle @BrianBilalK1 for all his PhD writing woes!

He can also be contacted via email: publichealthhourconcern@gmail.com