

Zohra Mhamdi

Dr Zohra Mhamdi is a Senior Medical Doctor from Tunisia who specialises in tropical and infectious diseases. She has been practicing Medicine, since 2002 in a multinational environment. For example, she served as a referral Doctor in several international organisations such as the African Development Bank.

Dr. Zohra Mhamdi also held positions as a Senior Manager, Chief Medical Officer, and Chief Executive Officer in a number of private hospitals. In addition, she has a strong academic background and considerable experience in the management of hospitals and the provision of health services of high quality.

Since February 2015, Dr. Zohra Mhamdi has been working for the Tunisian National Institution of Accreditation. Her responsibilities include membership in two working groups set up to develop national guidelines for preventing infections in primary health care institutions and prepare the Manual of Accreditation of these institutions. She has also been designated as the person in charge of the project on “Practice Clinical Guidelines”.

Dr. Zohra Mhamdi has been a member of Guidelines International network: G.I.N since August 2015.